Health and Wellness

With today’s technology, you can find an application (app) for just about anything. Simply download an app on your smartphone or tablet and you have information at your fingertips. A recent study by market research firm Nielsen claimed that the average person uses 27 apps a month, which sounds like very few considering that Apple and Google’s app stores both have more than 1 million apps available. Individuals are turning to their smart devices for information on health and wellness as opposed to just the most recent Facebook, Twitter, or Instagram update. In a recent study, 62% of smartphone owners used their phone within the last year to get information about a health condition.

There’s An App for That...

Did you know that SBCCD’s two medical insurance carriers, Anthem Blue Cross and Kaiser Permanente, have their own mobile app available for download? Simply go to your smart devices respective application store and download for free the Anthem Blue Cross app or the Kaiser Permanente app.
